TEXT

The Brothers de Zubiaurre are of Basque origin, that strange proud little province which gave to the world of art that unexcelled painter, Zuloaga. They were born in the province of Biscay, not far from Guipuzcoa, the home and birth place of Zuloaga.

Both painters have brilliant qualities which bid fair to make them enormously popular in this country.

Both are colorists and work with the meticulous precision of the Old Dutch Masters.

However, their method of painting is their own, although one recognizes the fact that in common with other Spanish painters, they partake essentially of the same National feeling.

Leonce Benedict, Director of the Luxembourg Museum, commends them to our attention in his statement that "The two young painters have entered their careers with sincerity, with simplicity, deeply imbued with the feeling of the picturesque and exotic grandeur of Spain. Both retained our sympathies, stirring our souls with the same emotional intensity they have themselves displayed in painting for us familiar, touchingly humble types caught in the attitude of life under exceptional aspects. They are representative painters of their country, of their race; their art translates their whole moral characteristics. Good painters, true Spaniards, they continue worthily, like their illustrious elder, Zuloaga, the fine vigorous lineage of the Spanish School."
